

¶ By the King.

Lthough it cannot be without griefe to vs to publish, that in this our Kingdome We should finde any Subiect so contrary to all the rest of our louing people, Who in so great multitudes haue made perfect prooef of their unspotted loyaltie to vs : Yet hath there such an accident happened so farre beyond our expectation , as we could not conceale it without prejudice to our Selfe , and our Estate, Whereof we assure our Selues, that al our good subiects wilbe very sensible, That is, that it hath bene discouered to vs by severall persons, that one Anthony Copley , the yonger brother of one Copley that is lately returned from forreine parts into this Countrey, hath dealt with some to be of a conspiracie to use some violence vpon our Person, whereby must either haue followed perill to our life, or danger of innovation in our State. whiche Anthony Copley, hauing bene sought for since his practising with others, by the ordinary Officers and ministers of our State, in places about our Court, and our Citie of London, cannot yet be found : So as it seemeth he lurketh very closely, awayting opportunitie to attempt his treasonable purposes, or to procure other of our Subiects to conspire with him in so disloyall a fact.

Wherefore We haue found it necessary to make publike declaration to all our people of his wicked purpose, knowing well that all true and loyall Subiects, howsoever diuided from the State in matter of Religion , will abhorre so ungracious and traiterous a minde , of which good affection wee require them all to make prooef, by doing their endeouours to discouer and apprechend the sayde Anthony Copley wheresoever hee may bee found : Charging all Lieutenants, Deputie Lieutenants, Justices of Peace, Maiors, Shiriffes, Constables, and all other our Ministers whomesoever, to be diligent in enquiring and searching for the said Anthony Copley : Whom if they shall happen to take, Our pleasure is they send him presently to our Priveie Counsell, or to some of our ordinary Magistrates, to abide the triall of our Lawes for his fact. And do further declare, That if any person of our Realme shall conceale, harbour, keepe or maintaine the sayd Anthony Copley , after they haue by this our Proclamation, or otherwise, notice of his traiterous purpose : wee must, as there is just cause , extend against them the power of our indignation, and the rigour of our Lawes, though wee shall be sorry to find any such occasion giuen by any of our Subiects whom we doe hold so deare.

Given at our Honour of Windsor the second day of July, in the first yeere of our Reigne of England, France and Ireland, and the sixe and thirtieth of Scotland.

God sauе the King.
